Hi Amy, sorry to leave meeting early, but I was suddenly convinced that you guys could have no real influence on the market place, unfortunately for the farmers that attended they have probably wasted their valuable time and may be given false hope that some how sorting the number of issues raised will some how lift the price around the world and then here! Unfortunately I don't see how that can happen, most farmers would happily stay put as most factories are paying a similar price excepting this year, and instead of paying" to get more milk, the processor simply buys from the lower paying processor, the variable price will always be there, and moving to another won't be an answer for the majority, so I guess we just battle away and or go broke unless the world price or economy can save us! thanks greg brooks
