As much as I enjoy receiving mail from various parties this will now become extinct. I couldn't even send Christmas cards. It's bad enough that some posties don't read the address as I've had various letters addressed to [REDACTED] which is me but they don't read the street number, do the people who deliver mail have regular eye tests? I think they should, the address was in no way obscured and clearly eligible. I also feel the postal system is gradually getting worse. Even when they deliver a package they don't press the door bell firmly and leave a card, when a person is disabled with no relatives, friends or family the package is returned to the sender, there is a ramp which should clearly indicate there is a disabled person and they should always wait no matter to whom they are delivering, surely they can wait five minutes, I know of many people who do not receive their package because the doorbell rings and the deliverer immediately turns and walks off. Absolutely disgusting service.
