Good afternoon,

I myself as a small business owner would like the ACCC to reconsider allowing price increases for Australia Post.

When sending an item, overseas, that there is no way to differentiate easily from a small items that needs to be tracked to a an item which is also small but not small enough to fall into the untracked options, to be able to afford such a thing from here to around the world let along within Australia. I have two main items for sale, one of which is under 2cm depth and as such unless I pay for a larger package, cannot send overseas, the problem with this items is it cost only a few dollars, and to send it untracked is still at least 10 dollars, and tracker 20+.... how is this viable?

Yes I understand as a small business owner, that I do not have the supply such as Amazon, who get postage far cheaper, but why should those little businesses suffer because they don't have the same reach?... and never will as people constantly leave "checkout" due to postage.

I implore you to revisit these costs to make Australian made products easier for people around the world to actually buy!

Regards
