

Roy, Lauren

Subject: FW: eBay International AG - Notification - N93365 Submission
[SEC=UNCLASSIFIED]
Categories: SEC=UNCLASSIFIED
ACCC Classification: SEC=UNCLASSIFIED
Security Classification: IN-CONFIDENCE

From: Archive [mailto:
Sent: Tuesday, 22 April 2008 8:28 PM
To: Registers, Public
Subject: eBay International AG - Notification - N93365 Submission

EXCLUDED FROM PUBLIC REGISTER

Sir.

I am contacting you to voice my concerns and make a submission about eBay's new requirement that all sellers are forced to accept paypal.
While paypal is a handy medium for offshore sales, even with its well publicised risks regarding scammers filing chargebacks. (Google Paypal Scams and see what comes up)

I see no reason why it should be compulsory for Australian sellers to accept it from local buyers. I already pay GST and with ebay fees, GST and paypal fees it is eroding into my profits too much
Australian consumers already have several government agencies for complaints and protection and therefore paypal is not necessary here.

Ebay should give sellers a choice as to who they accept paypal from either from international buyers or local if they wish.

Ebay has been using a slick marketing campaign for sometime using fear and paranoia to drive buyers into using paypal .as a result I am finding that my sales results are down considerably

I feel that ebay should be held accountable via a class action for loss of income for sellers who are being targeted by ebays heavy paypal negative marketing campaign

Paypal have no interest in protecting buyers or sellers. if they did they would use other mediums to establish sellers identity similar to any recognised bank, they are only interested in skimming more money out of the market.

Please suppress my name and contact details as any previous complaints I have made to ebay always result in loss of service

These people are Nazis

Regards C. Jackson