

Roy, Lauren

---

From: Blanch, Belinda on behalf of Adjudication
Sent: Monday, 21 April 2008 10:28 AM
To: Chisholm, Shane; Roy, Lauren
Subject: FW: Ebay [SEC=UNCLASSIFIED]
Categories: SEC=UNCLASSIFIED
ACCC Classification: SEC=UNCLASSIFIED

---

EXCLUDED FROM PUBLIC REGISTER

From: [REDACTED]
Sent: Sunday, 20 April 2008 1:01 PM
To: Adjudication
Subject: Ebay

Hi I would like to let you know that if EBay goes this way (PayPal only) it will lose a lot of sellers and buyers, the idea of eBay (as a lot of people see it), is a place that you can get a bargain, and this way a lot of people that don't have much money can still buy nice items, but the thing is, most people that don't have a lot of money to spare don't have Credit cards or PayPal and the other people that use eBay don't like using credit or Debit cards online or like me just rather pay by direct deposit, I'm spend a lot of money on eBay and like to do a direct deposit, I have used PayPal but only when I buy items from overseas or if the item is over $500, I, like most people don't like the idea of my bank account details (or credit/debit card if you have one) saved on some server in the US, I have had over 15 emails this year asking for my PayPal account details because it has been closed...of course I knew this was a scam but not everyone will, however in all the years I have been using direct deposit I have NEVER had a scam email from my bank...so tell me what is the safest way to deal on eBay?