I write to express my opposition to the move by Ebay to require payment by cash (very impractical) or Paypal.

I have used Ebay, mainly to buy and have found it most convenient to use bank deposit using the internet. There has been no problem with identifying the payments, they are traceable, have no added fees and are secure. I have also used cash once or twice for local buys, but this was very rare.

Why don't they do the experiment in the United States where Paypal is much more prevalent.

This just looks like another way to skim a little off the top.

I recommend that EBay not get an exemption in this area. The system works, why change it.
