Subject: RE: EBAY'S PUSH TO PAYPAL

I wish to add my voice of objection to eBay's proposed enforcement of paypal on their site in June of this year.

I have been a relatively small seller on eBay over the last 3 years and purchase even less. I am having fun just downsizing and selling off unwanted things around the house. I offer direct deposit into a bank account and/or money orders and have not had any hassles at all with my fellow ebayers.

It appears eBay is making a decision which is very unpopular amongst its customers. I am in favour of 'Freedom of Choice' and not having to accept eBay decision to make Paypal compulsory, adding extra costs and fees to seller's accounts (which is exactly what eBay will be doing).

Since reading this website, along with media reports, it appears to be very common that Paypal does not have a very popular reputation at all.

I will have to seriously consider whether I will continue selling on the eBay auction site in the future.

Thank you for your time and consideration in this matter.
