I am a fairly small user of eBay compared to some but I find their pending changes to be a blatant grab for funds. By owning the only company that they are prepared to deal through, they can set fees at any level they wish and there can be no competition and no choice. The only way that eBay could claim this was not the case is by charging no fees for the use of paypal for auction purposes. eBay cannot be allowed to totally control this area of the market.

Kind regards,

Greg McDonald
