To Whom It May concern:

Though I live in the United States, I recently became aware of eBay's effort in Australia to block all forms of payment from buyers except Paypal.

This is unfair for so many reasons, not the least of which is the number of people who only use Money Orders to pay for goods because of very justifiable concerns over internet identity theft.

But it seems to me, naively perhaps, that it should also be illegal and an anti-trust violation given that eBay owns Paypal and could therefore be positioned to completely control all aspects of every transaction.

For the benefit and safety of both vendors and buyers, it's my deep hope that this issue can be effectively quashed in Australia -- and so it doesn't spread any further!

Thank you for your time and attention.
