Dear Sir/Madam

I am writing again to further voice my objection to eBay's submission to the ACCC for a Paypal only policy on their site. I did submit my original objection on the 16th April 2008 and received a confirmation email that my email to the ACCC was read, but nothing further and am disappointed that my submission was not acknowledged or used by the ACCC.

Up until a few days ago I was a Qualified eBay Powerseller operating a successful on-line business, I have now lost that hard-earned Powerseller status and suffered huge financial losses due to the unpopularity of the new policies eBay management have introduced which have already proven to be detrimental to the Australian economy.

eBay have also caused havoc with the few sales that are possible by hiding our bank details during checkout, a practice they have consistently implemented since February 2008 and their ill thought advertising promotions are an attempt to instill mistrust between buyers, sellers and reputable financial institutions, one campaign was comparing the use of anything but Paypal to the like of drug users.

I support the ACCC's recent decision to deny eBay immunity for their submission and hope the final decision can come quickly to save the future of all on-line businesses and allow us to immediately start repairing the unnecessary damage that this Paypal-only saga has created.

I am happy for my name to be included with this submission but would prefer for any other personal information to remain confidential.

Thankyou for your time and supporting Australians with your objection to eBay's submission.

Regards
Phyllis Said
