

Submission by Katie Lee-7 September 2025

The SPSA scheme should be run as a not-for-profit enterprise and costs for this service should not be borne by the consumer. This scheme should also include supporting projects to mitigate the amount of waste produced, including plans to reduce soft plastic use in all supermarket products, and investigations into the practical use of the recycled material where avoidance is impossible. It should be run independently from the brands initiating it, so that priorities can be aimed at meeting targets, not maximising positive PR.